

Turning in your final ELA assignment:

We are approaching the end of distance learning and our ELA lessons are now complete. First of all, give yourself a pat on the back for trying this new way of learning how to write a research paper. If we were in the classroom, this project would have been multiple drafts with multiple revisions and edits. Since that is not the case, we are going to conclude here. Once you are done with your revising and editing (it doesn't have to be perfect or completely rewritten) please submit what you have.

How do I turn in my work? - We are hoping you can have a little fun with this. Please pick one of the options below and send it to your teacher by Friday, June 5th.

- A picture of the completed work
- A typed file shared digitally
- A video of you reading your work

*Optional: You are free to add drawings, text features, a cover page, or anything else that might be fun, but it is not required.

You did it!
